

ALLIES WARN HUNGARY OF DISASTER IF CARL IS PERMITTED ON THRONE; RESIGNATION OF HORTHY REPORTED

Czechs, Jugo-Slavs and Roumanians Ready to Advance if Former Emperor Mounts Throne—Agreement will Draw Italy into the Fray Against the Hapsburg Machinations

WAR CLOUDS GATHERING DAILY

Paris, April 1.—The Allies today warned Hungary that "disastrous consequences" will result if former Emperor Carl is restored to the throne. The warning was dispatched by the Council of Allied Ambassadors.

The note declared the Allies will not tolerate the Hapsburg restoration and will not recognize such a movement.

London, April 1.—The resignation of Regent Horthy of Hungary in favor of former Emperor Carl was reported here today by the Exchange Telegraph.

Paris, April 1.—Admiral Horthy, regent of Hungary, has indicated in favor of former Emperor Carl according to Budapest dispatches today. Carl is reported advancing on Budapest with troops under General Lehar.

Count Andrássy, former Premier, was said to have been named President of the Council of Ministers to conduct the government until Carl formally resumes his throne.

Lehar's army was expected to reach Budapest tonight. The advance of Lehar's army toward Budapest was greeted with great rejoicing.

Czecho-Slovakia concentrated troops today along the boundary line opposite Gran. To the south Jugo-Slavia has an army of 30,000 ready to cross the border. East and south Roumania concentrated a large force.

The three governments declared an immediate advance would be made if Carl mounted the throne. The three relied on the cooperation of Italy with whom they have agreements.

Paris, April 1.—France has informally assured the nations of the little entente that she will support necessary military movements against Hungary if former Emperor Carl is not renounced, it was learned here today.

TEN LOSE LIVES WHEN FREIGHTER AND STEAMER COLLIDE ON PACIFIC COAST

Seattle, Wash., April 1.—Ten lives were probably lost when the freighter West Hartland and the steamship Governor collided early today. The Governor was sunk off Port Townsend. The West Hartland, badly damaged, was expected to reach Seattle today with 291 survivors. According to a wireless report here, three members of the crew and seven passengers are missing. Several of the crew of the Governor were injured. The Governor went down in an hour and ten minutes after it had been rammed by the West Hartland.

NEW STATE HIGHWAY BIDS ABOUT TEN PER CENT LOWER THAN A MONTH AGO

Harrisburg, April 1.—Bids for 110 miles of improved highway were opened by the State Highway Department today. Commissioner Sadler announced that bids were from 8 to 10 per cent lower on 94 miles of highway opened yesterday than those opened on February 18, and rejected as too high. A majority of the low bids came from outside the state, it was announced. Ohio, New York, Illinois, Wisconsin, New Jersey, Massachusetts, and Delaware were some of the states sending low bids to the Highway Department.

ARMISTICE DAY, NOVEMBER 11TH, NOW A LEGAL HOLIDAY IN PENNSYLVANIA

Harrisburg, April 1.—Governor Sproul today signed the Miller bill making Armistice Day a legal holiday. The bill is based upon the law of 1893 designating bank holidays. It names November 11 as Armistice Day. The American Legion bill making it unlawful to wear the insignia was also signed by the Governor and now becomes a law.

WILL WITNESS DU'BOIS SCRAP

A large number of Clearfield fight fans will journey over to DuBois tonight to take in the big boxing program being put on at the Columbia Athletic Club. There are several rattling good preliminaries but the real feature of the evening is the bout between Young Jack Dempsey, of Rochester, and Charlie Dunn, of Pittsburgh. These boys fought a fierce draw about six weeks ago and tonight's go is sure to develop a knockout. It promises to be a great scrap.

The advanced pupils' recital at the Susquehanna College of Music last evening was the magnet which drew a capacity crowd to the College Auditorium on Locust street, despite the bad weather and so many counter attractions about the town for the evening. These annual advanced pupils' recitals are features eagerly looked forward to by the music lovers of this section and the mere announcement of the date is sufficient in itself to pack the house.

In addition to the local people friends of the College from Woodland, Curwensville and other near-by towns were numbered among the audience.

PRESBYTERIANS HAD WONDERFUL SOCIAL TIME LAST NIGHT

One of the most pleasing and most highly satisfactory meetings held by the Presbyterian congregation was the reception last evening tendered the new members, taken into the church during the year ending April 1st.

During the past twelve months 122 new members affiliated themselves with this church and the pastor and officials of the church decided to have them meet the congregation at a formal public reception. The end of the year was decided upon for the time for such function and all the new members were so notified.

DYNAMITE "PLANT" ROUSES DUBOIS OUT OF NIGHT SLUMBER

DuBois, April 1.—An explosion that rocked the business centre of the city and inflicted damages amounting to several thousands of dollars took place this morning at 12 05 o'clock in the basement of the Carmelli pool room on West Long avenue. The concussion aroused the entire neighborhood and an alarm of fire was sent in, bringing out the entire department.

Investigation disclosed that several sticks of dynamite had been "planted" at the door of the basement at the street entrance. The interior of the basement was a wreck, while a deep hole had been blown in the solid cement floor. The pool room on the first floor was also pretty badly wrecked. The pool room had been closed but a few minutes before the explosion, nobody being in the building when the dynamite let loose.

On the second floor all of the front windows of the Anderson tailor shop were blown out. Joe Anderson was taking a bath at the time the explosion occurred, and he stated that it certainly jarred him around the tub.

Across the street at the McCarty bakery, the large plate glass was smashed. Windows were also blown out in Dr. J. B. Davenport's office on the second floor and in the Masonic room on the third floor. At the Lian restaurant, diagonally across from the pool room windows were smashed. The blast seemed to travel towards West Long avenue, more windows being smashed in that direction. To the east no windows were blown in, so far as could be observed.

It is believed that the planting of dynamite was the work of Angelo Carmelli. It is stated that Angelo Carmelli, one of the persons involved in the raid made by the police on this establishment several weeks ago, and one of the proprietors of the pool room, had received a large batch of letters from an organization styling themselves "The Society of the Iron Hand." These letters made a demand on Angelo Carmelli for the sum of $2,000 with the threat that every week payment was delayed, the sum would be increased by $1,000. These letters, supposedly, were mailed from Pittsburgh and Mr. Carmelli took them to Clearfield recently, where they were deciphered at the Sheriff's office. The letters were liberally embellished with cross bones and skulls and were very bloodthirsty in nature. It is possible that the author or authors of these letters had something to do with the explosion of this morning.

Deputy Sheriff Gilliland of Clearfield was a visitor in DuBois, and made an investigation shortly after the explosion. He reported the circumstances to District Attorney John C. Arnold by phone this morning.

Sheriff Gorman, Deputy Gilliland and Corporal Mannion of the State Police raided a poker joint in the basement of the Carmelli pool room about two months ago. Following the raid some bad blood was engendered among the four alleged proprietors of the room, when an attempt was made to "pass the buck" in fixing the blame. Patsy Carmelli endeavored to make it appear his uncle Angelo Carmelli, was solely responsible for the poker joint. Angelo objected and the result was a $2000 fine and 30 days jail sentence for Patsy, and $500 fine for Angelo Carmelli and one of the other proprietors.

The explosion is no doubt a result of the raid.

D. B. McCarty, the baker, and Joe Anderson, the tailor, who suffered in the explosion are former Clearfield people.

REQUIEM MASS FOR RT. REV. MGR. SHERIDAN

Out of respect to the memory of the late Rt. Rev. Monsignor P. J. Sheridan, whose funeral will be held at Oil City, Pa., at 9 o'clock Saturday morning next, Rev. Father M. A. Ryan has arranged for the celebration of a high requiem mass at St. Francis church at 8 o'clock Saturday morning.

MADERA CONSTABLE MAKING CLEAN-UP OF LAW BREAKERS

Constable Oscar Mannion, of Madera, is one Constable in Clearfield County that is cleaning up his bailiwick so far as bootleggers and illicit liquor distillers are concerned. He has been keeping 'Squire' James Ruffner quite busy these days making out informations and warrants together with their resultant commitments.

'Squire' Ruffner was in town today and visited the Prothonotary's office for the purpose of returning four liquor law violation cases to court. The defendants in these cases are Walter Kaplan, Andrew Remor, Alex Slovinski and Steve Antagelac.

These men were arrested in the Morgan Run country by Office Mannion on Easter Sunday, together with four other men, who cases have not been returned to court as yet. They are charged with violation of the liquor law, etc.

When the Constable pursued or fellow into his home the young man's father met the officer at the door and bounced a big iron pipe off his head. Never minding the flying splinters Mannion 'continue after his man and landed him.

In addition to the eight defendants arrested the energetic Constable also captured four latest im proved illicit stills, together with three revolvers and a shot gun which he discovered in the possession of as many aliens.

A few more Constables like Mannion properly distributed over Clearfield County would keep the law enforcement law other than the regular penal statutes of the Keystone state.

"Y" CIRCUS GREAT SUCCESS; ANOTHER SHOW ON TONIGHT

The "Y" circus last evening attracted a fair-sized crowd and a who witnessed the performance was more than pleased with the same. Two hours of genuine fun was the portion of each, while some of the stunts witnessed were indeed worth while.

Some fifty members of the different athletic classes of the Y. M. C. A. participated and Physical Director Rau's skill and ability as an athlete and athletic mentor was most favorably commented upon by all who saw the different features.

The circus was complete in every detail, including the street parade which even the bum weather could not head off.

In addition to the skillful athletic feats so generously displayed enough comedy was mixed up in the program to keep everybody in good humor and the spectators were a unit in their praise of the management. Not a "skin game" was allowed on the grounds and to eliminate the usual objectionable features of the concert and side show, they, like your old maid auntie's appendix, were both cut out.

The "circus" is there both way from the middle. You don't have to take our word for it, you can judge for yourself as the performance will be repeated tonight and Saturday night. Also if you do go and are not satisfied you can't get your quarter back down there football season is over, and Ringmaster Cook said so, but we will give you credit for the "two bits" on your Progress subscription.

But try it tonight or tomorrow night; you sure will be surprised at what the boys can do.

BABY STILLMAN FIRST CARE OF COURT SAYS JUDGE; ALIMONY IS INCREASED

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., April 1.—Mrs. Potter Stillman today was granted a portion of the additional alimony and counsel fees which she had asked for in the divorce suit of her husband, James A. Stillman, president of the National City Bank. Justice Morchauser granted her $7500 a month alimony and $35,000 counsel fees and $12,500 additional expenses for witnesses. She had asked that her alimony be increased from $5,000 to $10,000 and or $75,000 counsel fees.

With regard to Guy Stillman, alleged son of Fred Beauvais, the Justice said "our law in its wisdom provides for the care and protection of those who cannot protect themselves, especially infants. There is such an infant in this case. The infant is made a defendant and its paternity questioned. The courts are charged with the duty of protecting it. In this case the infant is represented by an honorable and eminent member of the bar who will protect the infant's interests and give it the best that is in him and bring into play the learning and ability that the law expects. The interest of the defendant and the infant in this case are to a great extent the same. The contest means much and no mistake should be made. It should not be permitted to be made. Litigation is expensive and troublesome and such litigation as is anticipated in this case means bringing of many witnesses from many places and a long and protracted trial."

CLYDE OGDEN WAS KILLED AT MANVER THIS MORNING

Clyde Ogden, a former Clearfield boy and an employe of the New York Central railroad, for a number of years was instantly killed about 3 o'clock this morning when caught between two cars at Manver junction or cross over near Colver.

The deceased had been employed as a freight conductor on the Cameron & Indiana railroad for some time past. This morning with his crew he was making up a train at Manver preparatory to making a trip back to Colver. Two engines were being used in hauling or shoving the cars out onto the main track. Ogden was on the rear end of his train and another trainman named Weaver was on the front end of the other. The distance between the approaching sections was misjudged and the two trains came together with a crash and tumbled together.

As the cars came together Ogden saw his danger and attempted to escape by crouching down. He was unable to do so, however, and was caught squarely between the two cars and crushed to a pulp.

Weaver, the second man, had both legs crushed and was otherwise seriously injured. He was taken at once to the hospital at Pilesville, but little hope for his recovery is held out. Mr. Ogden's body was taken to Colver where it was prepared for burial and the funeral, we understand, will be held at Cherry Tree Saturday afternoon.

Clyde Ogden was the son of the late Irvin Ogden and was born and raised to manhood in Paradise. He was about 23 years of age. Of a genial, sunny disposition, he made friends of all with whom he came in contact and a large circle of warm friends in this section will mourn his untimely end.

He leaves a widow and either three or four children. His mother, Mrs. Arch Poorman and several brothers and sisters also survive him.

While there is love in the world candy will be given—for what the lover leaves unsaid he wants his gift to tell

PARIS GREEN QUICK ON THE TRIGGER WHEN USED CORRECTLY

(By United Press)

In the battle against the bugs everybody wants action, says the American Forestry Association, and for that reason Paris Green is used in preference to other things because it is quicker on the trigger than arsenate of lead, for example. This widely known bug getter is, when pure, a brilliant green and a finely divided powder. Here is the combination suggested by the American Forestry Association for spraying purposes: Paris Green, five-eighths of an ounce; Lump Lime one pound; Water or Bordeaux mixture (never lime-sulphate) fifty gallons.

In small quantities use Paris Green, one teaspoonful; Lump Lime size of a walnut; Water two gallons. This should be applied in a liquid spray or may be used with ten or twelve times its weight of plaster Paris flour or fine air-slacked lime, which is preferable. Burning of the foliage when spraying with Paris green will occur on account of a small amount of water-soluble arsenic. This difficulty may be overcome by using an equal amount of lime which counteracts the burning qualities. The use of Paris green for spraying is advantageous in case the poison needs to be removed where plants are used for show purposes. The same is true in its use on certain fruits which are approaching the ripening stage.

APRIL

The real beginnings come in April: "As ye sow, so are like to reap." Best seeds and best breeds best serve the world's needs—and best repay the farmer. Don't forget wheat; plan for lawns and flowers. Risk some early plantings in the garden. This cost is not great and extra-early crops bring rewards. Work without ceasing.

Soon across the folding twilight Of the round earth rushed to hear. The first robin at his vesper's Calling forth, serene, and clear. —Bliss Carman.

April Weather.

The average spring increase in temperature is greater in April than in March, but occasionally there are cold periods, especially in northern districts; the coldest of record is slightly more than 10 degrees below zero near the north-central border, and as far down as the east Gulf coast freezing temperatures are of record early in the month. As a rule, killing frosts are not experienced after April 15 south of a line extending through central Virginia, Western North Carolina, and the southern portions of Kentucky, Missouri, and Kansas.

As spring advances, a pronounced increase in precipitation takes place throughout the Plains States and much of the Rocky Mountain area, but a marked decrease of rainfall on the Pacific slope. Thunderstorms become more frequent, especially in the lower Mississippi Valley.

PLANS

The thing that counts most is not mop acres but more profit to the acre; not more cows but more profit from each cow; not more hours of labor but better returns. Ask the county agent the most profitable farm practices and best systems of management.

Newest Discovery

Experimenters at Dr. Pierce's Hospital in Buffalo, N. Y., for several years proved that there is no other stimulator of uric acid that can be compared to Anuric (anturic acid) Tablets. For those who recognize symptoms of inflammation—as backache, scalding urine and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, it is simply wonderful how surely "Anuric" acts. The best of results are always obtained in cases of acute rheumatism in the joints, in gravel and gout, and invariably the pain and stiffness which so frequently and persistently accompany the disease rapidly disappear.

Go to your nearest drug store and simply ask for a package of Anuric Tablets. "Anuric" is manufactured by Dr. J. C. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. or even write Dr. Pierce for a full package (10 cents).

STATE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE NOTES

There are approximately 11,972 pure bred bulls owned on farms of Pennsylvania, along with 3,387 pure bred heifers and 4,122 pure bred cows. The number of pure bred bulls and heifers shows a decided increase over a year ago.

In 1920 there were 557 registered and 392 unregistered stallions licensed by the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. In 1910 the number of stallions registered in the state was 2,385, a decrease of 65 per cent in ten years.

On March 1 it appeared that the farmers of Pennsylvania were holding 31 per cent of their 1920 wheat crop, or $340,320 bushels, as compared with $758,830 bushels at the corresponding period a year ago.

The number of flocks of sheep in Pennsylvania is estimated at four per cent less than a year ago.

Approximately 57 per cent of the farms of Pennsylvania are provided with telephone service.

SMALL ICE CROP IS HARVESTED BY FARMERS

Only about sixteen thousand farmers in Pennsylvania cut and stored ice during the past winter, according to statistics compiled by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. The mild winter was largely responsible for this condition, farmers in the southern portion of the state being unable to store practically any ice.

The reports of the department show that eight per cent of all the farmers in the state cut and stored ice, while practically all the ice stored was in the northern and mountainous sections of the state, where during the December cold spell ice froze to a depth of eight inches.

EASY TO DARKEN
YOUR GRAY HAIR

Try this! Brush Sage Tea and Sulphur Compound Through Your Hair, Taking one Small Strand at a Time

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur no one can tell because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By evening all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and not a medicine. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

ODDS AND ENDS
AND THINGS

By "Skinney"

Over in Paris the street cleaners, garbage haulers and about all the tough-labors to be found in and around the city are attired in American army uniforms brought across the pond for the use of the A. E. F. and sold at a bargain to the French government after the war ended. The American Legion is considering a protest to the authorities against such misuse of the uniform.

We have been notified by Sheriff Gorman that the Jury Commissioners of Clearfield County, with their usual great care and good judgment, selected us as one of the sixty "good men and true," including four women, to hear and decide all matters to come before the court during the week of May 9th. We accept this particular assignment with more or less reluctance. We have been "argifying" and jointly "settling" things with one woman the past thirty years and find at times that it is some job with just this one woman; how we shall get along on the jury with four women—well, by Heck, that's a boss of a different hue. We are fearing and prepared for the worst, especially in view of the following tale given to us by a friend in extending sympathy, and who says he has "the papers" for the story regarding the perversity of the feminine mind when employed on jury duty. We give the publicity for the benefit of our fellow male sufferers. Here's the story:

"A certain inherent stubbornness in feminine nature is going to make the woman juror an unknown quantity also.

Here's a story which illustrates this point and which comes from another State: Twelve women were formed into a coroner's jury to decide whether a motorman whose street car had killed an aged woman was guilty or not guilty. After hearing the evidence the jury was left alone to render a verdict. One of the twelve was a masterly matron who found that her eleven companions were of one mind in the matter and that she alone differed.

She is one of those annoying creatures who can sleep at will, so what did she do? She took off her hat and her fur coat, rolled the latter into a pillow, and lay down on the floor with her head upon it.

"Waken me when the rest of you have come to my opinion," said she, sweetly, and went cozily to sleep. Her companions watched her with growing hatred for five mortal hours. Then knowing that their dinners were growing cold and their husbands impatient they awakened her and told her that they had capitulated, and an apparently harmonious jury brought in a verdict of "Not guilty."

But the eleven have no diplomatic relations with one now, and all are agreed that jury duty is not for persons who have any regard for lady-like behavior.

Let it all pass on of our lady jurors are like "that there."

Speaking of laws and lawyers, and the ruling of the United States by the United States Supreme Court, we just want to quote Norman Hapgood in adding one of the reasons why the average man is losing all faith in courts, judges and lawyers generally. Recently congress passed a law forcing railroads to adopt safety coupling appliances. One road broke the law and a simple workman named Lang got killed in consequence.

The majority of the Court said the road was not liable. Justice Clarke tried to prove it was, and Justice Day agreed with him.

Justice McKenna, for the majority, said the safety device was intended to provide safety for persons standing on the platform. Therefore, as Lang was not killed in the way Congress is supposed to have had in mind, there could be no recovery.

Lang was a brakeman. He was working in the yard containing a car for which the coupler and draw-bar had been missing for several days. The yard was crowded. Lang had to move another car around in the yard.

Through no fault of his own, as Justice Clarke explained, his car bumped into the defective car. His leg was crushed and he died. Had the New York Central obeyed the law he would not have been hurt.

The contention on the other side was that the car was not in use at the time, whatever that has to do with it. Justice Clarke says it was in use, since it was in the yard to be unloaded, and was actually unloaded that day.

It was on a truck that was constantly used. Anyhow the result is the same to the Lane family. Legislation in this country is a difficult art.

It has always been our observation that the uglier the man the prettier the girl he marries.

And a lot of men act as though they thought the goose that laid the golden egg was a gander.

Some wives consider themselves charitable when they merely let their husbands have their own way

Beware of the man who imagines he owns the earth—he may want to sell you some of it at war-time prices.

Upon the response of the churches of America depends the death toll from starvation in China, according to an appeal issued today by Bishop Thomas F. Gailor, president of the presiding bishop and council of the Episcopal church, for an even more intensive effort on behalf of the famished millions in the Far East. At the same time a similar appeal was sent out by Dr. Robert E. Speer, president of the federal council of the Churches of Christ in America. Bishop Gailor and Dr. Speer are both members of the American committee for China famine fund, of which Thomas W. Lamont is chairman.

Bishop Gailor points out in his appeal that the relief at present available in China "is sufficient for only a few of the unfortunates in peril of starvation" while at the same time "the problem of buying, transporting and distributing relief has been fully solved," and adds that the important thing now is to get funds for the purchase of food until the June harvest will bring permanent relief.

"The death toll from starvation," Bishop Gailor continues, "will depend upon the response of the churches. By prompt, generous and sustained giving they can very greatly lessen it."

Dr. Speer, in his appeal, struck a similar note, declaring that "heavy as the death rate may have been, the worst weeks still lie ahead—those terrible weeks between now and the coming of the first live-giving crops of Spring."

"There are approximately 10,000,000 people now dependent on foreign assistance if they are to survive," Dr. Speer continues. "Careful surveys have shown that the relief agencies now in the field can administer effectively $25,000,000. Some $7,500,000 has been supplied by the Chinese government, private charities in China and relief agencies in Japan, Australia, Canada, England and other interested countries. China is looking to us for the remainder."

FISHING

Lots of folks do not care to fish, and generally speaking it's because they do not know how. Moreover, it is equally true that in most of these cases the fish know that these people know nothing about fishing. An old friend of ours, who drops around occasionally with an invitation to go fishing, always interests us with his fishing stories. He fishes because he likes to, and know, how. And of course, under the circumstances, he catches fish. He says the average man hasn't enough patience to catch fish, and that's why there are so many poor fishermen.

Two things you've got to have plenty of, he told us the other day, are good bait and patience. Location doesn't always have the most to do with it, he says, and he argues that you can catch fish, like finding trouble, right where you least expect to. He says he doesn't "spit on his bait" and doesn't know why some people do. But he adds that if it gives a fisherman confidence in doing so then it's like a woman going to a fortune teller and learning that she already knew—it's nobody's business but her own.

The fishing season is about here again. And we can't think of a better way for a fellow to ease soul and body and rest his mind from business cares for a few hours than to get a pole and line and a few worms and hike out to some nook where he thinks they'll bite. But—be sure and take along the right kind of bait, and don't forget to take along a lot of patience.

Webster —Man's Man

By PETER B. KYNE

Author of
"Cappy Ricks," "The Valley of the Giants," etc.

(Copyright, by Peter B. Kyne)

"Dear Friend:
"A certain higher-up has been convinced that it would be extremely inadvisable to eliminate you now. It has been pointed out to this person that you are a prom. off. up in your neck of the woods and dangerous to monkey with—personally and because such monkeying may lead to unpleasant complications with your paternal government. A far more artistic and effective way of raising hell with you has been suggested to this higher-up individual, and he has accepted it. Indeed, the plan pleased him so much that he laughed quite heartily. Really, it is quite diabolical, but remember, he who laughs last laughs best—and I'm the villain in this sketch.
"Barring accidents, my dear Webster, you are good for at least six weeks of existence. Beyond that I dare not guarantee you.
"Thine,
"ANDREW BOWERS."

"That makes it nice," the recipient of this comforting communication so-illuminized. He went up to his room, picked a duffle bag with such belongings as he would find necessary during a prolonged stay in the mountains, and at luncheon was fortunate enough to find Dolores in the dining room when he entered.
"I'm going up to San Miguel de Padua this afternoon," he announced as he took his seat. A look of extreme anxiety clouded her lovely face, and he noticed it. "Oh, there's no risk," he hastened to assure her. "That scamp of a brother of yours, through his friends in high places, has managed to get me a reprieve." He handed her Ricardo's letter.

She looked up, much relieved, from her perch. "And how long do you expect to be gone, Caliph?"
"Quite a while. I'll be busy around that drafted concession for a couple of weeks, surveying and assaying and what-all; then, while waiting for our machinery and supplies to arrive from the United States, I shall devote my spare time to hunting and fishing and reforming Don Juan Cafetero. The cool hills for mine."

"What a selfish, unsocialable program!" she reflected. "I wonder if it will occur to him to come down here once in a while and take me for a drive on the Matecon and talk to me to keep me from dying of ennui before I meet Ricardo. I'll wait and see if he suggests it."

However, for reasons best known to himself and the reader, Mr. Webster made no such interesting suggestion; so she decided that while he was tremendously nice, he was, nevertheless, a very queer man and thoroughly exasperating.

Just before the train pulled out John Stuart Webster took Dolores' hand. "Good-by, Seeress," he said very solemnly. "The trail forks here for the first time—possibly the last, although I'll try to be on hand to make good on my promise to present you to your brother the day he occupies the palace. However, if I shouldn't be in town that day, just go up and introduce yourself to him. It's been wonderful to have met you and known you even for such a brief period. I shall never forget you and the remarkable 24 hours just passed."

"I shall not soon forget them myself, Caliph—nor you," she added. "Haven't you been a busy little cup of tea, Caliph? Within 24 hours after landing, you have changed your mind three times, lost the best job in the world, had your fortune told, been marked for slaughter, acquired a new-found friend and commenced actively and with extraordinarily good results the work of reforming him, soused a gentleman in the fountain, spurned another with the tip of your boot, rode with me around the Matecon and listened to the band concert, bundled poor Billy off to San Miguel de Padua, discovered my brother presumed to be dead, and received a reprieve from your enemies, while they perfect new plans for destroying you. Really, you are quite a Caliph."

"Oh, there's a dash of speed in the old horse yet, Miss Ruey," he assured her laughingly. "Now listen; don't tell anybody about my brother, and don't tell Billy about my adventures since he left for San Miguel de Padua."

"But I'm not liable to see Billy."
"Yes you are—extremely liable. I'm going to send him back to you as soon as I can state him, because I know you'll be homesome and kind to death in this lonesome town, and Billy is truly good company. And I don't want you to tell him about the mess I'm in, because it would only worry him; he can't aid me, and the knowledge that I was in any danger, real or fancied, would be sufficient to cause him to rebel against my plans for his home—for his vacation. He'd insist on sticking around and protecting me." He looked down at her little hand where it lay on his, and said:

You know that the price of anything is based on what it costs; you know the best materials and highest grade labor costs more than cheaper stuff. These are simple, well-known business facts.

brown and hard; with his free hand he patted her hand paternally. "Good-by, Seeress," he said again; and turning to the steps, he leaped aboard just as the train started to move out of the station.

"Good—good-by—Caliph," she called mournfully. Then to herself: "Bless his heart, he did remember I'd be terribly lonely, after all. He isn't a bit queer, but oh, dear, he is so exasperating. I could bump his kind old head against a wall!" She turned her back on the train, fearful that from where he clung on the steps he could, even at that distance, see the sudden rush of tears that blinded her. However, Don Juan Cafetero, with his rubicund nose to the window of the last coach, did see them—saw her grope toward the carriage waiting to take her back to the hotel.

"Why, shure, the poor darlint's cryin'," he reflected. "Be the Great Gun an Athlone! Shure I fought all along 'twas Billy Geary she had her eye on—God love him! An' he the same token, didn't she tell me I was to shay sober an' take care av Misher Webster. Hah-hah-a-a! Well! I'll say nothin' an' I'll be neutral, but—but—but—"

From which it may be inferred that romance was not yet burned out of Don Juan's Gaelic soul. He would be "neutral," but—but—but—he reserved the right to hurt in!

CHAPTER XII.

Arrived at San Miguel de Padua about midnight, Webster found the climate temperate, in fact, decidedly cool. Billy was waiting for them and was properly amazed, but not sensationalized when Don Juan Cafetero, abusing the station hands in a horrible hodgepodge of English and Spanish, superintended the landing of the baggage on the platform.

"I had to bring him with me," Webster explained. "I'm going to warn him, and after that baby quits crying for his bottle, believe me, Bill, we'll have the prince of a foreman for our mine. Quite a character, is Don Juan, when you dig down into him."

"Dig far enough into that ruff and you'll find fire crackers," Billy admitted. "However, John, I'm afraid he won't explode. The powder's damp. How did you leave Dolores?"

"Fit as a fiddle, Bill."

"How does she stack up on better acquaintance, Johnny?"

"She's a skookum lass. She sent her love and I promised to send you back to her P. D. Q. So don't bother me with talk about her. You'll see her again in a week or ten days, I hope."

"N-? Is that so Johnny? Billy for you, you old scampus cat. Tell Don Juan to steer you over to the Globo de Oro. He knows the place. I've got to go and hire a mule or some other quadruped for Don Juan if we're to avoid a late start in the morning. Good night, old fellow."

They were up at daylight, and with three heavily laden pack mules in charge of two semi-skilled mules, while the cook jogged comfortably along on his big spiny feet in the rear, they set out for Billy's ranch-house.

For 30 miles they followed the highway, and then descended to the south-west along a neglected road just wide enough to accommodate the clumsy ox carts of the peons. The country was sparsely settled and evidently given over to stock raising.

Darkness had descended on the valley by the time they had pitched camp at the claim. They were up at dawn the following morning, however, and immediately after breakfast Jack Webster went to his duffle bag and brought forth a dozen little canvas sacks and a prospector's hammer.

"Now then, William, my son," he announced, "light the lantern and we'll see if you've forgotten all I taught you about mining."

They clambered up the dump to a point where two light steel rails projected over the edge. On top of the dump lying beside the rails, were two small, rusty steel ore cars; the rails led from the edge of the dump to the mouth of a tunnel in the hillside and disappeared therein.

Webster stood a moment, looking around him. "How did you happen to locate this ledge?" he demanded. "Was it guess work stuff, with an outcropping here at the foot of the hill? No, of course, it wasn't. You haven't enough ore on the dump. What the devil were you driving at?"

"Only a small portion of that dump is mine, Jack, and I didn't locate the ground originally. I came into this valley from the south, and as I worked up the range, I found a hard spot close to the top of the hill, and a galows flame over an abundant shaft. Naturally, I went down the shaft to see why it had been abandoned. To my surprise, I found a 12-foot vein of free-milling ore, on a contact between gneiss and Shinarump limestone. The ledge stood straight up and down, which seemed to argue great depth."

"Somebody had found an outcropping on top of that hill," Webster declared with conviction, "and sunk a shaft on the vein to open it up and determine its width and direction. And what did you do, Billy?"

"I got my transit and ran a line from the shaft up the hill, following the direction in which the ledge was running, and marked out the exact point toward the base of the hill where

I would start my tunnel to cut the ledge. To my surprise, I discovered my predecessor had selected that identical spot. So I verified my calculations and then sat down to think it over. I remembered that frequent and violent earthquakes occur in this country, and it seemed to me a reasonable hypothesis to blame some ancient and particularly violent seismic disturbance, which had faulted the vein and set it over a considerable distance. According to my calculation, that other man should have cut the vein at 83 feet—yet he had gone on 102 before quitting. So I got half a dozen pens and drove ahead 19 feet on the other fellow's tunnel; and by Heck, Johnny, I cut the vein!"

"Bully boy! And then?"

"I drifted ten feet on the vein, and the ore suddenly gave out. It stopped just like that, proving I'd come to the upper end of the vein where it had faulted; so I just worked up and around, stopping and sinking a winze here and there, until just about the time my cash reserve was getting pretty low I picked up the true vein and opened it up for the full width. Come in, and I'll show you."

They entered the tunnel, to the signal dismay of dozens of large bats. When they reached the vein, Webster broke off samples of the ore every three or four feet, crawled after Billy up through the slope and back to the true vein, from the face of which he also took numerous samples; then he crawled out into the sunshine again, hot, dirty, and perspiring.

"Billy, you'll be a real miner yet; see if you won't," was all the praise

he tendered his youthful partner, standing beside him in anticipation of a compliment, as Webster got out his portable assay outfit.

For three days Webster worked, determining the values of each sample, only to find that his assays confirmed Billy's. "You were right, son," he finally announced. "This mine is a humdinger, and no mistake. If you and I live ten years we'll be worth $10,000,000 between us—maybe more."

Billy's jaundiced eyes glowed hungrily. "We'll put in a hundred stamps."

"Well, we'll try ten for a starter," Webster interrupted dryly, "and add more as the mine pays its way. It's the sweetest mining proposition on earth—only, like all high-class goods, it has one flaw when you examine it closely."

"Top're crazy," Billy challenged.

"Name the flaw!"

"Stamps!" Webster replied smilingly. "That scoundrel makes a gambler out of an otherwise sane thing. However," he added, recalling the note received from Ricardo Ruey just before his departure from Buenaventura and reflecting that to be forewarned is to be forearmed, "we'll accept the gamble. That rascal can't live forever, and he may be eliminated before he causes us any trouble."

"What will it cost us to get this mine on a paying basis, Johnny?"

"Well, back home, I'd figure on spending at least $100,000; but I dare say, taking into consideration the low cost of labor in Sobrante and the raw, natural resources of power and timber right on the ground, we ought to put this deal over for $50,000 at the outside. Praise be, I have cash enough to do the trick without calling in any help, and such being the case, we'll not waste any time but hop to the job in a hurry and make the fur fly."

"Right, Jack. What's the program?"

"Well, first off, son, I'm not going to stay in this country and lose myself managing this mine. That's your job, because you're young and unimportant in your profession and have the ability to get away with the job. You can afford to spend the next 15 years here, but I cannot. I can only afford to come down here every couple of years and relieve you for a vacation."

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

At last the good citizens of Curwensville have been aroused to the truth that there are gambling and booze joints being operated in open and direct violation of the law. It has been known for some time that one of these pest spots has been in operation for a long time at what is known as Naulton, and kept by an Italian gentleman who seemed to fear neither the law nor the people. So notorious had become this resort that professional gamblers made it a stopping place on their trips through this district. Several weeks ago a watch was put over this place unbeknown to the man who ran it. Enough evidence was soon secured to warrant an arrest. Last Saturday night officers made a raid on the place and not only found evidence of a poker room but also more booze than is usually allotted to one family. This is not the only shack that has been conducting an unlawful business in this town, and which has been under surveillance for some time, and as the gentleman said who brought us the above information yesterday, "there is going to be some surprises take place among some people who are least expecting it."

Miss Eileen Smith, of Clearfield, spent Wednesday evening as the guest of Miss Helen Kephart, and remained over night in order to attend the play by the seniors in the Academy of Music.

The home talent play "In Hezekiah's Country Store," given in the Academy of Music on Wednesday evening, for the benefit of the High School library, proved to be a flattering financial success. The play was under direction of Charles W. Bahn, who had each one of the performers drilled in his or her part to perfection. As the cast of characters was a lengthy one, we cannot speak of the work of each individually, but collectively each and every one performed the part assigned to them in a manner worthy of "old stage performers." We are informed that the play will be reproduced tonight.

After the close of the local talent entertainment Wednesday night, a social dance was held in the Moose hall, at which a great many of the performers took part.

Street Commissioner Dale has been trying his level best to get the dirt streets and alleys in good shape, but it seems about the time he "has got that," a rain comes along and upsets all of his well laid plans.

Hon. Charles E. Patton, wife and daughter, came up from their farm below Harrisburg on Wednesday to attend the funeral of William Patton Russell, a nephew and cousin.

Mrs. Colonel Ganoe arrived in Curwensville from West Point Wednesday, summoned here on account of the death and funeral of her brother, Lieutenant W. P. Russell.

The sad announcement to friends in this place Wednesday morning of the death of William Patton Russell, which occurred in New York City the evening before, came as a sad shock. Deceased was the only son of Charles S. and Mary Russell, and unmarried. During the World's War, he served out two enlistments, both on overseas duty, and won for himself a commission as First Lieutenant. Being of a quiet and serious disposition he did not make friends readily. In his deportment among all classes he was always the perfect gentleman. Of late years most of his time was spent outside the confines of his home town, and many there are who knew him only by sight, having no personal acquaintance with him, and it is to those of us who knew him best and watched his progress in life while passing from boyhood to manhood, that sorrow and grief falls the heaviest. In whatever situation or position he was placed, he performed his duties with that zeal and integrity which was characteristic of him and won for him the confidence of those who employed him and trusted him implicitly. Not a taint of dishonesty has ever been traced to him during the whole of his short business life. He never allowed enmity nor bitterness of feeling toward his fellow man to enter into his life. His entire earthly life was clean and without mar; his soldier life on foreign soil changed nothing in him; he returned home to his parents, clean of limb, of body and of mind. William Patton Russell was an exceptionally fine young man, and one that the good people of any community would be pleased to have it said of him "he was a native of our town." Deceased was a member of Joshua Sipes Post, No. 505, American Legion, and also a sincere and devout Christian connected with the M. E. Church.

Joe Patton of Philadelphia was in Curwensville this week.

CARNWATH

Easter Day service at Carnwath, Pa., was beautiful and edifying to its worshippers. The attendance at Sunday School and church was very good. A special collection was taken for relief in China, with good results, $5.00.

Mr. R. H. Sommerville has underwritten the minister's salary for another year, under the same conditions as last year.

Mrs. John Fleck, the efficient Supt. of the Sunday School, was absent last Sunday, and will spend a few more days in visiting relatives and friends. She has been at her post faithfully during the past year.

WITHOUT LIMIT

There are a few big moments in "Without Limit." These tense moments stand out as the high lights in a sumptuously mounted picture whose theme is the brotherhood of man. It is adapted from Temple Duss, a story by Calvin Johnston published in the Saturday Evening Post. The characters are painted with a depth of understanding, and a truthfulness to life that makes them appealing, and real. The young wastrel the girl whom he marries while on a drinking spree, his father, a strong-willed and uncompromising minister, and the gambler, through whom the author speaks his philosophy, are splendidly conceived and artistically interpreted. Anna Q. Nilsson as the girl gives an excellent performance rising to unusual emotional heights, and the remainder of the cast are uniformly good.

"THE LOVE SPECIAL"

One is mightily puzzled before a Wallace Reid picture these days, puzzled, that is, in distributing credit to the acting. Steam engines and racing cars, bustling dams, and nowstorms are, to be sure, the chief actors, but Mr. Reid smilingly takes what bows there are. Whether he is bowing for himself or for the steam engines—well, anyhow, "The Love Special" is another unblushing "hero" picture with something of our own Rocky mountains and railroad pioneering in it, something of recklessness with Mr. Reid at the throttle, and something of suspense, but not enough to deceive. Agnes Ayres is the heroine, and so lovely and capable a creature deserve better than so safe and sane a trip through so uninspired a story. The novel from which it was taken is "The Daughter of a Magistrate" by Frank H. Spearman.

Miss Ruth Lawhead, of Nichols street, left this morning for Belle Vernon to visit Miss Helen Mayer, also friends in Pittsburgh.

MINSTREL SHOW A LAUGH FACTORY TO THE LAST CURTAIN

The St. Francis Minstrels gave their opening performance at St. Francis hall last evening and despite the inclemency of the weather an audience which filled every seat in the large auditorium was on hand for the same. The minstrels made a hit last season and those fortunate enough to witness one of their performances, then were in their seats when the curtain arose last night prepared for an evening of real enjoyment. They were not disappointed.

The show was complete in every detail and was carried through from curtain to curtain with a dash and swing that would have done credit to professionals.

All the star performers of last year's show were on the boards last night while a large number of new faces appeared in the different acts, with many new features and innovations added to the program.

The music was high class throughout, the singing and dancing of real high character while the jokes were full of pep and punch.

The show will be repeated tonight and all who failed to be present last night should sure make an extra effort to be present this evening.

The management and those participating are to be congratulated on the huge success attained last evening.
